MY STORY

Anna's Birthday

"One, two, three, four, five! One, two, three, four, five!" Anna was counting the fingers on her hand, again and again. She couldn't stop, couldn't fall asleep; she kept fantasizing about tomorrow. For tomorrow was her fifth birthday. "IT FEELS LIKE IT'S TAKING FOREVER FOR TOMORROW TO COME!" she sighed. "I know," said her sister, Elsa, "I feel the same!" She had a surprise for Anna, and she was eager to show her. But she had to keep it a secret for now.

Just then, their mother, Queen Iduna, came to tuck them into bed and say good night. “The best way to make tomorrow come faster is to go to sleep. Then, when you wake up, it will be your big day.” Anna still wanted to know more about it: “TELL ME WHAT IT WILL BE LIKE!” Mother described a grand party with fancy food, beautiful decorations, many guests, and a pretty new dress for the birthday girl. Anna finally closed her eyes. . .

SHE DREAMED ABOUT THE NEW DRESS ALL NIGHT, and when she woke up, there it was, sitting in the corner of the room. Perfectly tailored, with embroidered trim and lace at the hem, it was the prettiest dress Anna had ever seen. “It’s so fancy!” she exclaimed.

Gerda, a royal servant, helped Anna into the new dress. “You look fantastic!” Elsa said when Anna stepped out into the hall. “Now it’s time to get your hair done for the party!”

ANNA WAS SO EAGER SHE TOOK OFF RUNNING. “I’ll race you there!” But she tripped over her own feet and fell. So she ended up having dust all over her new birthday dress. “Oh no!” she said, mad at herself. “Did I ruin it already?”

Elsa chuckled. She brushed Anna’s dress clean, calming her down: “Now it’s perfect again.” Anna knew her sister was right. Hand in hand, they skipped down the hall.

The hairdresser was waiting for them. "Birthday curls for the birthday girl!" she exclaimed and set to work without hesitation. Soon Anna had a headful of little curls. But she couldn't move: the hairdresser said the curls had to set for one hour. "WHAT? HOW CAN I SIT STILL FOR A WHOLE HOUR?" Anna asked, anxious. Elsa had a wonderful idea: "I'll read you a story!"

At first, it was hard. Anna was listening to Elsa's story, but she was also thinking about her hair and her party and her guests and her cake. BUT THEN, THE STORY TOOK OVER, AND ANNA STARTED TO IMAGINE BEING THE HERO. A fearless knight in shining armor, defending Arendelle from evil forces.

When Elsa had read the last word, the hair was finished. "It looks perfect!" Anna exclaimed, looking in the mirror. "Or almost perfect..." She spun around in a circle, and a single curl came loose. Now she really liked her hair and was ready for the royal birthday party.

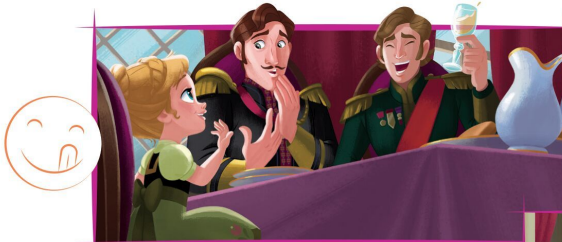

"Wow!" she whispered as she peeked into the banquet hall. There were so many people. ANNA DIDN'T WANT TO EMBARRASS HER PARENTS; SHE KNEW PERFECT MANNERS WERE IMPERATIVE. She walked into the hall with her head held high, nodding politely at each guest seated at the table. She was trying so hard to be like her sister Elsa.

Anna behaved perfectly all the way through dinner. It wasn't difficult, but she definitely didn't enjoy it. Sweeping her skirt under her so it wouldn't crease when sitting . . . keeping her elbows off the table . . . making sure to eat everything on her plate and constantly smiling . . . IT WAS NO FUN AT ALL. BUT ANNA KNEW HER PARENTS WOULD BE PROUD OF HER, SO SHE KEPT GOING. Until she let out a loud BURP!

She couldn't help it; she couldn't stop it. "Excuse me!" she said, her cheeks turning red in embarrassment.

Anna looked up at her father, feeling terrible. But King Agnarr was smiling. "Don't worry," he said. "Sometimes a burp is a compliment to the chef!" And then he burped, too! "Now the chef knows we both enjoyed the meal!"

Anna felt better. But then the cake came. And DESPITE HOW HARD SHE TRIED, ANNA ENDED UP WITH FROSTING ON HER FACE! She crossed her eyes and saw a pink glob on her nose. Anna nearly licked it off before catching herself: that'd be unacceptable at a royal party, Anna knew. Before she could do anything, her mother came to the rescue. Queen Iduna swiped the frosting off Anna's nose and ate it. Everybody laughed. The celebration was saved.

Later that night, Anna was getting ready for bed and felt a bit frustrated. SHE'D BEEN CONCENTRATING SO HARD ON HAVING PERFECT MANNERS THAT SHE HADN'T HAD A CHANCE TO HAVE ANY FUN. She'd have liked a real party, something less proper and more . . . "Are you ready to celebrate with a sisters-only party?" said Elsa, entering the room. "A what?"

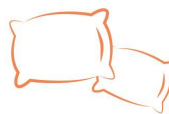

"A sisters-only party!" insisted Elsa, grabbing Anna by the hand and pulling her into the hall. Anna thought she'd just had a party, but she was wrong. This one was going to be completely different. "There are just two rules," explained Elsa. "No manners, and no grown-ups." Anna couldn't say no. This was precisely what she was hoping for!

"So . . . what do you want to do first?" Elsa asked. Anna didn't need to think about it. "I WANT TO EAT SOME CAKE WITH MY HANDS—NO FORKS AND NO PLATES!" And so they did. They raided the kitchen for leftover birthday cake and joyously scarfed it down.

"And now?" Elsa asked. "Now . . ." whispered Anna, "I WANT TO BUILD THE BIGGEST PILLOW FORT EVER SEEN!" The two sisters snuck into the laundry and took out as many pillows and blankets as they could carry. Back in Anna's bedroom, they built the fort and even had a pillow fight!

"THIS IS THE BEST BIRTHDAY PARTY I'VE EVER HAD!" exclaimed Anna. But it was going to get even better. Elsa could finally give her sister the gift that she'd been keeping secret from her since yesterday: a portrait she'd made of the two of them. "Do you like it?" she asked. "I LOVE IT!" replied Anna, excited and moved.

The amazing sisters-only party was over, the castle silent, and everyone else asleep. It was Anna's birthday no more, but she was not sad or disappointed. SHE WAS HAPPY AND JOYFUL AND GRATEFUL. It had been the most perfect day thanks to her sister, Elsa. Next time, Anna thought before dozing off into her dreams, I'll make her birthday party extra special...

LEARN MORE ABOUT THE BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY
AND CULTURE THAT INSPIRED ANNA'S HOME.

A Frosted Place to Live

BY DEB BARNES

TRUE NORTH

The beautiful landscapes, fjords, and mountains of Anna and Elsa's kingdom look like the ones in Nordic countries, such as NORWAY or DENMARK.

And nearly everything in Arendelle, from architecture to costumes, looks like it belongs in the Nordic cultures of the mid-1800s. In fact, Frozen is inspired by Hans Christian Andersen's classic story The Snow Queen, written in 1844.

INSPIRING DESIGN

Many of the buildings in Arendelle are inspired by the town of BAL-ESTRAND and the city of BERGEN in Norway.

They look similar to a type of architecture called DRAGESTIL, which often combined dragon and other animal motifs with the popular style of the time.

Fun Fact

DRAGESTIL IS A STYLE OF SCANDINAVIAN ARCHITECTURE. IT MEANS "DRAGON STYLE."

DRAGESTIL DESIGN

SNOW FUN

In a land like Arendelle with lots of deep snow, sliding across the terrain is the fastest way to get around. Sledging has long been a part of life in Nordic countries, especially among the SAMI, the seminomadic native people who herd reindeer.

Sami often compete in DOGSLED RACES. For many years, some areas of Norway held a Christmas race that involved driving sleds across icy roads and lakes. It was created to celebrate the ancient story of a troll who raced across the wintry countryside.

Several types of traditional Norwegian sleds show up in Frozen, including the TOBOGGAN, made of bound parallel wood slats bent forward to form a sideways "J" SHAPE. When the wise troll Grand Pabbie removes the magic from Anna's memories, Anna sees herself as a child riding down a snowy hill on a toboggan.

Fun Fact

KRISTOFF'S OUTFIT IS INSPIRED BY TRADITIONAL SAMI CLOTHING.

FANCY FEET

Frozen takes place at a time when dance in Nordic countries was changing. People were traveling more, bringing in trends from places like France and Germany.

Formal court dances became more complicated, including WALTZES and POLKAS, which were popular at the time. Yet the old folk dances were still popular, too. Both can be seen in Elsa's coronation celebration: In one scene a group performs a FOLK DANCE IN A CIRCLE, while in another Anna and Hans dance the waltz together.

A TASTE OF THE NORTH

Anna gets excited about a lot of things, and one of them is FOOD! In the nineteenth century, increased shipping trade in Norway introduced exotic foods like SUGAR, COFFEE . . . and CHOCOLATE, a favorite of Anna's and Elsa's. Chocolate makes an appearance when she sings "For the First Time in Forever," along with Norwegian treats like KRUMKAKE, a cream-filled wafer.

KRUMKAKE

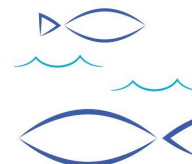

LEFSE

Norway is a SEAFARING COUNTRY, so it's no surprise that fish is a favorite dish. For example, in Frozen, Oaken gives Anna a jar of LUTEFISK—cod fish soaked in cold water and lye until it becomes jellylike. It's often served with LEFSE, a Norwegian flatbread.

Fun Fact

LUTEFISK
MEANS
"LYE FISH."

SKIING WAS INVENTED

KINGDOM OF ARENDELLE!

LET'S GET ACTIVE

Hit the Slopes!

BY DEB BARNES

BORN TO GLIDE

Cave drawings suggest that HUMANS USED SKIS DURING THE LAST ICE AGE—which ended nearly twelve thousand years ago, so that's a long time! Fragments of early skis FOUND IN RUSSIA date back to 6000 BC.

NEOLITHIC DRAWINGS ON A
LARGE STONE IN THE LANDSCAPE
OF ZALAVRUGA IN BELOMORSK,
REPUBLIC OF KARELIA, RUSSIA.

Those were probably NOT INVENTED FOR SPORT BUT FOR SURVIVAL, so that people could cross frozen wetlands and marshes to hunt reindeer and elk.

BY THE 1760S, PEOPLE HAD FIGURED OUT A WAY TO MAKE A GAME OF GLID-
ING: The Norwegian army was holding skill competitions that involved skiing down slopes, around trees, and through snowy fields.

Fun Fact

SKI IS AN OLD NORWEGIAN WORD THAT MEANS "A SPLIT LENGTH OF WOOD."

Soon people all over Europe were skiing just for fun. By the 1880s, the rush of swooshing down a mountain had made downhill (or ALPINE) skiing more popular than sliding across level terrain (cross-country or NORDIC skiing).

These days skiing is one of the most popular winter sports, enjoyed by people all over the world.

POWDER RACES

ALPINE

DOWNHILL: Competitors race through a long course down a mountainside.

SLALOM: Skiers make turns around obstacles that are close together.

GIANT SLALOM (GS): GS races are similar to slalom, with fewer obstacles and wider turns.

NORDIC

CROSS-COUNTRY: The oldest type of skiing—competitors use poles to push themselves along trails across more level terrain, in sprints, team sprints, relays, and other events.

SKI JUMPING: Athletes ski down a takeoff ramp and jump from the end, "flying" as far as possible.

NORDIC COMBINED: A combination of ski jumping and cross-country skiing.

BIATHLON: Combines cross-country skiing and target shooting.

FREESTYLE

AERIALS: Skiers take off from a ramp and jump, twist, spin, and do acrobatic moves while in the air.

MOGULS: Athletes ski downhill on a bumpy slope, jumping and spinning and turning as much as possible.

SNOWBOARDING

Athletes swerve, jump, and do acrobatic stunts as they ride downhill on one wide, board, similar to skateboarding on snow.

SLOPE STYLE

Skiing is great exercise and lots of fun. But you can't do it just anywhere in the spur of the moment—you need the right gear. Luckily you can rent it all at a ski resort or ski school, where you can take lessons.

SKIS, POLES, AND BINDINGS: You'll need an expert to fit you with the right set for your height and weight.

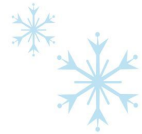

SKI BOOTS: You can rent them, or have someone help you find the right boots to go with your skis.

SKI JACKET, PANTS, GLOVES: You don't have to spend a lot on trendy snowsuits, but you'll be outside in the cold for a while, so you definitely need warm, insulated clothing.

HELMET: Learning to ski means lots of high-speed spills in the snow, so don't forget to protect your head!

GOGGLES: When you're zooming down a hill, falling snowflakes can feel like needles to your eyes! Protect your peepers with ski goggles.

ONE LAST TIP: Protect yourself from cold, but also from . . . the sun! Wear some SUNSCREEN and bring a LIP BALM in your pocket.

SLIDE AND RIDE

In addition to skiing, sledding is one of the most popular snow sports, especially for kids. That's because it's easy—just sit or lie down on something flat and speed down a snowy hill! Anna, Elsa, and Kristoff love sledding, too!

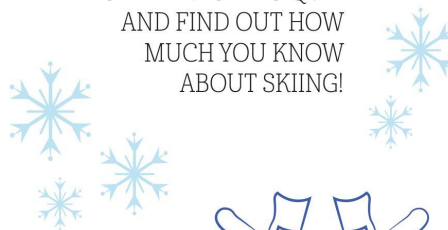

For most people, sledding is just for fun, but IT'S ALSO A COMPETITIVE SPORT. The Olympic Games feature three sledding events: LUGE (sliding feetfirst down an icy track), SKELETON (similar to luge, except you ride headfirst), and BOBSLED (racing in teams of four on a large sled).

Sledding doesn't require nearly as much gear as skiing, but whether you're in the Olympics or your own backyard, there is one piece of equipment that's a must-have: A HELMET!
